

Mid seventeenth century life in Ireland was tough. Bolard Monaghan's daughter, M'reen, found ways to make it exciting and wondrously profitable when she turned pirate at age eighteen. How this flame-haired beauty beat all odds in the pirate-ridden Caribbean during days of Spanish fortune laden ships, is beyond understanding.

'M'reen's features were stormy as she approached crowded shipmates and friends on shore. They gave way to her as she jumped out of the boat before it beached. Something was wrong. The crowd quieted as they saw her make for the group of Englishmen under guard. Everyone followed to see what it was all about. She stormed by, shoving several men out of the way to get to one in the center.

He was Charles Bentley, the captain of the ship.

"Ya miserable excuse for a captain - get out here! You have your choice of weapons. We fight, and you're going to answer to the mistreatment of men in your keep. Now, what's your choice?"
